THE - Diary of a 49'er

FROM THE BOOK EDITED BY C. L. CANFIELD

MARCH 8, 1852. — I went over to the race at Hughes' track this afternoon. There was a big crowd and a lot of excitement and reckless betting. There were a half dozen Marysville sports on hand and they backed their horse without stint. "Wake Up Jack," the Nevada horse, won the race by ten feet in a distance of a quarter of a mile, and they say the home gamblers were ahead more than twenty thousand dollars. Just for fun, I ventured a hundred dollars on "Wake Up Jack," and gained that much. I have said nothing to Pard about it, as he would surely give me a lecture on the folly of it. I note one thing, whenever I am around where gambling is going on I have an inclination to join in and I can now understand why so many miners are inveterate gamblers. The best way is to keep away from it and out of temptation.

The remains of Carter's body were found last week near the head of Myers Ravine, about a mile from his cabin. There was nothing but the skull bones, gnawed clean, and his shirt, overalls and boots; but the hair was the same color, and in the pocket of the overalls there were a knife, pipe and tobacco pouch that were known to have belonged to him. No sort of theory as to their deaths fits the case. It was not robbery. If it had been a quarrel and they had killed each other, their bodies would not have been found a mile apart. So far as known, they lived on the best of terms, and they were good fellows who had no enemies. It is not likely that both went crazy and wandered off to die. Some think that they may have accidentally poisoned themselves; but it is all guesswork and a great mystery.

MARCH 14, 1852.—When we thought the rain over a few weeks of good weather due, it began to storm again, and it is now worse than ever. My companion does not mind it, as he has settled down to studying his law books, and the rain is an excuse not to buckle to hard work again. In fact, if we carry out our project to work Rock Creek, he proposes to hire a substitute, as he pretends to be rusty in his profession and needs all the time he will have to spare to brush up before we go to San Francisco. I have no profession to study up and the hours hang heavy on my hands. I have written the old folks that I will be home early in the summer, and they are delighted. So am I, with the exception that I am not certain exactly how they are going to take to Marie. A foreigner and a Papist—what a shock that will be to mother, saying nothing about the gossip of my boyhood friends and neighbors. I will trust Marie to win her way with the old folks, and don't care a snap of my finger about the rest of them. On the other hand, what a big man I will be back there, returned from California with a sack full of gold, and the richest man in the village, with the exception of old Squire Battell! What little difference it makes to us here whether a man has money or not. I know half a dozen men on Selby Hill who have taken out in the past year anywhere from forty thousand to sixty thousand apiece, and a dozen more who have made still more than that from mining ground on Gold Flat, Coyoteville and Manzanita Hill. They don't put on any airs and nobody envies them. We don't ask what a man is worth or how much he has got. The only question is, is he a good fellow? If he is, he is one of us; if he isn't, we let him alone. Even brains and education do not count for very much and some of the most ignorant are the most prosperous.

JUST WONDERIN'

I Wonder about titles now
And those who proudly wear them,
And those dear democratic souls
Who simply cannot bear them;
Some titles are inherited
And some are nobly won,
Some speak of dim ancestral fame
And some deeds well done.

If Shakespeare were alive today, he might find material for another play, titled, Much Ado About Nothing, in a recent social episode of no importance whatever. A social leader living in an eastern city gave a party. Among her guests, were a Countess and a young person of sternly democratic tendencies.

The young person refused to recognize the ancestral title, the Countess was affronted and the hostess greatly distressed; indeed there was a tempest in a teapot and the case was taken to a radio court of appeals. Just three empty headed women who were not content until they had given their empty headedness nation wide publicity.

The young person should have been taken aside by an older and wiser soul and instructed in the art of social rage; the Countess should have ignored the discourtesy and the hostess should have apologized to her guests and allowed the affair to be forgotten. Making an issue of a young person's lack of form seems to indicate that those involved were quite childish, to say the least.

Titled personages who come from abroad to visit in America should, if they are worthy, be accorded the same degree of courtesy which titled Americans expect when traveling abroad. "No titles in America?" Not inherited titles, but we certainly do have titles. Military titles, political titles, scientific titles, titles earned by long and arduous study in branches of research or academic study. Titles? We have ecclesiastical titles which no one refuses to honor, titles held by those who are outstanding in the world of sports and a huge array of strange, often wierd titles bestowed upon the great pooh bahs of our fraternal and secret organizations. Yes, in America, titles are not lacking, so if a little lady with an inherited title contacts us socially or otherwise, she is entitled to her garment of greatness and if we would be courteous, we will say, "how do you do, Countess," and smile graciously as she responds, "how do you do."

I Wonder if Mr. Henry Wallace will continue to be a thorn in the flesh of both grand old parties all through this year 1948. Third parties never win in America, but they sometimes shift the balnce of power and bring about the downfall of favorite candidates. Mr. Wallace knows this and so do the followers of the donkey and the elephant. There will be much braying and trumpeting in the days to come and I predict that the presidential campaign from start to finish, will afford us no dull moments.

Uncle Silas says; "While most of us are worrying about the high cost of living, a small minority of Americans are concerned with the cost of high living."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Thad's Feet Hurt

After a long, hard day's work on the farm, Thad's idea of how to spend an evening is to take off his shoes, and relax with a mellow glass of beer.

But his missus has other ideas. After being in the house all day, she's all for walking to the village, if it's only for a soda. Likes to see people, catch the latest gossip. But Thad says, no, his feet hurt! Began to cause unpleasantness in Thad's home.

Then Bill Webster comes up with an idea. If Thad takes the missus to Andy's Garden Tavern, Thad can relax with his glass of beer, and the missus can also chat with all the neighbors there. Each gets his (or her) own way.

Worked, too! In fact, now the missus likes an occasional temperate glass of beer herself. And Thad finds it's pleasanter to enjoy his beer with good companions, rather than alone. In fact, his feet stopped hurting too!

YEAR IN... YEAR OUT!

THE COST OF GAS AND ELECTRICITY IN YOUR HOME HAS GONE DOWN

It takes a lot of shopping around today to find a pre-war bargain. Practically everything in the line of home necessities, for example, has climbed steadily upward in price since 1939. However, there is one exception...the cost of gas and electric service has gone down and down in price.

Year in and year out your dependable gas and electric service has helped you run your home with money-saving and labor-saving appliances at rates far below the national average. And no matter how much other items in the cost of living may go up during this New Year, you can be sure that cost of gas and electricity will remain the biggest bargain in the home.
